

CHAPTER SUMMARY

- A competitive market has many buyers and sellers, each of whom has little or no influence on the market price.
- Economists use the supply and demand model to analyze competitive markets.
- The downward-sloping demand curve reflects the Law of Demand, which states that the quantity buyers demand of a good depends negatively on the good's price.